

Dayenu

Contributed by Esther DuBow

Source: <http://www.kveller.com/blog/wp-content/uploads/2011/01/dayenu.jpg>

During the Exodus, God performed miracles every step of the way. At our Seder we sing a song, “Dayenu,” in which we list all of those miracles and after each one the refrain is “dayenu” “it would have been enough.” Is that true? Stuck in the desert between a charging army of Egyptians and the Red Sea, doesn’t seem like a point in which we would think, “It’s okay God, you did your part, I’m good.”

Perhaps the intention of this song is that we need to make sure to appreciate and be grateful for each and every thing others do for us. In order to do that, we must remember those events uniquely, and here at the Seder we get a chance to do that.

Discussion Question: In what ways have others helped you? Is there anyone you think you should make an extra effort to say “Thank you” to?