My Passover

It seems no matter who you talk to the answer is the same, Passover means the time when we sit and think about how our ancestors suffered as slaves in Egypt. I like passover, don't get me wrong, but I do think it is weird how we celebrate. Why do we eat the nicest foods, drink the finest wines and lounge around like nothing happened? Why do we get to lounge in our chairs, and act carefree? Why is it that the only luxury we exclude ourselves of is risen bread? It doesn't make sense. Why don't we eat little food and sit upright to actually remind ourselves of how slavery treated our ancestors? To some people they can eat their Passover meal without wondering why we do what we do, but sadly not me, I have to second guess everything and wonder why we do what we do.
