We tell the story of Passover!

Leader: Questions are central to the Seder experience. In fact, questions are central to the Jewish view of religion. Jewish law and thought have always allowed, even welcomed, questions. In the process of questioning, new knowledge and new understandings emerge. Questioning is also a sign of freedom. Slaves don't ask questions. To ask a question is to demonstrate one's freedom to explore, indeed, to question the symbols, rituals, and philosophies of the Seder experience.
