אֶתְּיָא דִּד , אֶתְּיָא דִּד

One little goat, one little goat:

Which my father brought for two zuzim.

Then came the cat who ate the goat

Then came the dog who bit the cat

Then came the stick that beat the dog

Then came the fire that burned the stick

Then came the water that quenched the fire

Then came the ox who drank the water

Then came the butcher who killed the ox

Then came the angel of death who slew the butcher

Then came the Holy One, Blessed Be God who smote the angel of death. . .
